The test flu went away after the first week. As for the post injection pain I also figured out how to deal with it, now I only have slight injection site pain for a few hours nothing compared to what I experienced in the first week. I tried injections in my shoulders (not bad) and my chest (not recommended) because I couldn't move my legs. About 10 hours after my first test prop shot I started getting that well known soreness in my glute. it's been about 36 hours now and I'm getting ready for my next shot, but that glute is still sore as a bitch. the thing is, it's not so sore in the glute muscle itself, but it has spread to the dimple in my lower back above my glute and it is really painful.

Pain and soreness are completely normal after injections and are generally not cause for alarm. In one study, pain was reported by 80% of participants, "peaking immediately after injection, reaching only moderate severity, lasting 1-2 days and returning to baseline by day 4." This means that about 4 days after giving yourself a shot, any ...

Injection site really sore with TREN acetate + Test prop. Plz Help. I started tren ace (finaject 100) (100mg/ml) and test p (100mg/ml) made by AC laboratories source about two weeks ago doing .5 ml of each, 1 ml total EOD rotating left and right quad. I'm getting identical and very painful reactions to the injection regardless of site, starting ...

Never used prop before, but I'm definitely dealing with some pain. Injecting is painless. However, about 6-8 hours later the injection site starts getting sore. The day after is miserable! Shot my left cheek yesterday with 3/4 ml of prop (75mg) and 1 ml of test e (250mg) and my ass is sore as hell!

Ill be doin 150-200 eod and want to know how to cycle sites throughout each week? I.e sites, pin sizes and time of day. I'll be injecting myself so no crazy sites where u need a third arm.....???? Cheers in advance. I also included chin ups and a side to side variation, because these will typically be achieved sooner than a pull up. Get really good at chin ups and it will help you get your pull up. super fast reply
