Music, Electronics, Sell on eBay, Trending on eBay SR9009, also called Stenabolic, is a research compound that is often mentioned when people talk about SARMs (Selective Androgen Receptor Modulators). In reality, Stenabolic is not a SARM at all, it is actually a Rev-ErbA ligand. And first let me preface this by saying you're not doing anything wrong!! It's not your fault!! You are not the problem!! You only know what you know and unfortunately we live in a culture that floods women with messages of constantly needing to shrink or be on a diet or get skinny and let me tell you, there is a better way.

SR9009, also known as Stenabolic is a selective androgen receptor modulator used to "hack" the our bodies clock. It's said to help with endurance, cholesterol, anxiety, weight, and inflammation. There are many studies done on mice, and they have seen all of these benefits, but so far nothing done using human subjects. Stenabolic has a short half-life, so you feel the full effects soon after ingestion. SR9009 will boost the effects of your exercise and increase endurance and fat loss. If you're using stenabolic because you are diabetic or at high risk for stroke, and are also taking other maintenance medicines to control your condition, talk to your doctor.

So I advocate the same thing when using Stenabolic. During your first SR9009 cycle, keep the dose low, and monitor yourself carefully, with before and after photos, and a daily diary. Although SARMs are generally okay at lower doses, sometimes there can be problems, especially if you haven't bought pure Stenabolic.

Stenabolic (sr9009) was developed at the Scripps research institute by Professor Thomas Burris. It is NOT a SARM (selective androgen receptor modulator), but it is a Rev-Erba agonist drug.. In 2013, the Journal of Natural Medicine published a study showing that it helped with endurance and obesity in animal models.

In simple terms, SR9009 is very active as a result of the binding of proteins. SR9009 offers users lots of benefits such as fat loss and increased endurance.
