Fair Housing Act

This a federal law that allows the emotional support animal owner to keep the ESA inside the house, apartment or flat even if the housing society prohibits. No housing authority can restrict the breed, size or weight of the ESA. You need to understand that you do not have to pay any additional charges for keeping an ESA. The owner reserve the right not to show their personal medical report and the housing authorities should not require to contact the medical health professional. However, the housing authorities can legally deny the right of the owner, if the emotional support animal possesses a threat to safety and health, or causes an additional financial burden.

Air Carrier Access Act

This acts lets the owner of the emotional support animal take its ESA on a flight. No additional charge will be charged by the airlines. There is no restriction of breed or weight of the ESA if you have an ESA Letter. However some of the airline demand that the owner inform them at least 2 days (48 hours) before the flight. You should also submit the airline form before time. Your veterinarian may also be requested to fill a form for assuring the good health of ESA. But the airline reserve the right to prohibit exotic or dangerous animals like rodents, snakes or spiders.

ESA Letter

You must get an emotional support letter from your certified health professional for housing or traveling purposes.
